Dear Deja,

I went to this awesome basketball game. It was so exciting that it was the highlight of the year. It was a game between the Victors and the Hornets. It was 6 seconds to go and the game was really close. As if it was a life or death situation. The score was 67 Hornets to 68 Victors. The Hornets were the home team and it was the very last game of the season.

Henry was the Hornets best player, he dribbled the ball down the court. As the time was ticking away people were screaming. Henry looked so nervous and determined to win this that it looked like he went swimming. He was aware of everyone around him and he also saw a scout from his future school there.

The cheerleaders were screaming out Henry's name. They began to jump around and got everyone else even more excited. The coach was so happy and he was screaming out "Shoot the ball!" The coach's face was red and he began to unbutton his shirt from being nervous.

The coach's wife was there with their baby screaming by the overwhelming joy from the moment. The baby is smiling and laughing. There was this crazy old lady there who was selling socks. She turned around and threw the socks up in the air from the excitement because Henry was about to shoot the ball.

Then there was a band that was doing a drum roll to keep the flow of energy going. The crowd is going wild and people are screaming. There was a cop named Cassie by the door eating donuts and he sees the ball in the air.

The ball was getting released and one of the socks from the crazy lady hit Henry on the head, he fell down and the ball bounced around the basket about seven times. The ball went in and the Hornet's won! 69-68. Everyone screamed because the Hornet's won.

Henry was knocked unconscious by the sock. The police ran over and arrested the crazy old lady and she was convicted for attempted murder. But that was the most exciting game I ever saw.

Your friend,

Faith
